About Dan

Dan likes to tailor lessons to suit individual needs and spends time getting to know the music his students enjoy, introducing them to technique and repertoire and giving them the ability and confidence to play.

As well as grade exams, Dan is equally happy to work with young people who just want to experience the fun and personal achievement of learning, playing, and creating the music that they love. Dan strongly encourages creativity and likes to give students of all abilities the means to express themselves and communicate through music.

Dan can facilitate group workshops in music technology, building bands, recording and song-writing. Having nearly 30 years of experience in many aspects of the music industry, he is aware that being a musician can open unexpected doors and enhance personal development, self-confidence and self-discipline. Dan is committed to making music participation accessible to all.
